RED CROSS MAY STOP MEXICAN RELIEF WORK

Diaz's brother Felix, who now fought on his side, was captured and killed, and Diaz, meeting with heavy reverses, was soon a fugitive. He went into hiding in the mountains, but soon reappeared at the head of a band of Indians and captured the city of Chihuahua. While fighting in that neighborhood he heard of the death of Juarez.

Lerdo de Trejade, president of the Supreme Court, succeeded Juarez by law, and Diaz, recognizing Lerdo as President, quit the field and returned to his farm.
